Researchers in the Center for OCD, Anxiety, & Related Disorders (COARD) at the University of Florida are conducting a study to understand the causes of problematic hoarding and clutter.

STUDY PARTICIPATION

This study involves a questionnaire, an interview about your health and behavior history, EEG testing, cognitive testing, and a spit/blood draw. (About 1-10 hours depending on level of participation)

WE ARE LOOKING FOR VOLUNTEERS WHO:

- Have problems with hoarding and cluttering
- NO history of dementia, encephalitis, meningitis or severe head injury
  - OR -
- The relative of someone who has problems with hoarding and cluttering

If interested please email or call the PGENeS Research Team at PGENeS@hsc.ufl.edu or 352-294-5564.

Participants may be compensated for time spent in the study.